It is important that the State regulators know what they are being trained to find. It is critical that the BSA be interpreted by the proper Federal author-ity which is FinCEN. FinCEN has made great strides in providing guidance for BSA examination and interpretation on the banking side. What we need is a similar process through FinCENs new compliance unit on what is now largely a blank slate, which is the MSBs. Third, and just as important, we believe that under New York banking law our department has the authority to make sure that its licensees are in compliance with all State and Federal laws in-cluding the BSA. Other States do not see themselves as so empow-ered. Congress should make it clear through an amendment to the BSA that State MSB regulators do have the authority to enforce the BSA AML laws for MSBs in their States if they wish to do so. Absent that unambiguous message...
