Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Transactions of the American Microscopical Society, Vol. 20: Twenty-First Annual Meeting Held at Syracuse, New York, August 30, 31 and September 1, 1898 He was a man whose life was spent in nature's great laboratory, and if he had been spared to address us on this occasion, we would have listened to an important chapter from nature study. He taught during his lifetime the existence of higher and nobler ideals. Personally, I am much indebted to the living influence of his forceful character and, if perchance, in my feebleness in trying to do as he would have wished, I shall be so fortunate as to kindle anew or deepen your interest in pure or applied biology, cherish the thought as a reflected message from him who would, had God willed, instructed us this hour. Under the trying circumstances, I had some difficulty in selecting a topic for this formal address. The little time since this unexpected duty fell to me has been so overcrowded with other and more imperative duties, that it was impossible to carry out a new, or even complete, any line of investigation, the results of which could be used on this occasion. Likewise it was too brief for preparing a discussion on any of the broader and more fundamental problems centered in any of the sciences represented in our society. It so happened, however, that following this call to duty, I had occasion to adjust a course of instruction in comparative bacteriology, to meet the needs of students of human medicine, and, at the same time, to fill it full for those who were seeking knowledge in comparative pathology. In working...
